Table of Contents

Their Hopes, Fears and Reality: Introduction
Melinda Dooly........................................................................................................... 9

Third World Solidarity and ‘My World’ Insolidarity: Working with the Wide Spectrum of Students’ Attitudes towards Others
Claudia Vallejo & Montserrat Oller............................................................................... 37

Developing Art Projects as a Medium for Exploring Children and Youth’s Hopes and Fears
Esther Collados............................................................................................................. 75

Their Hopes and Fears: A Catalyst for Project-Based Language Learning
Melinda Dooly............................................................................................................. 99

Citizenship, Cooperation and Social Action
Alistair Ross................................................................................................................ 133

Between Classroom and Social Reality – Developing Active Citizenship in School
Beata Krzywosz-Rynkiewicz & Anna Zalewska............................................................ 163

Bridging the Gap: Primary and Secondary Students’ Engagement with Global and Environmental Issues
Cathie Holden............................................................................................................. 189

Dealing with Citizens of the Future’s Needs through the Promotion of Self-Efficacy in Teaching
Elena Briones & Carmen Tabernero ............................................................................... 209
Fostering Cooperation to Manage Situations of Interdependence Successfully
Carmen Tabernero & Elena Briones ......................................................... 231

Contributors ............................................................................................ 253