

Contents

List of tables	page vii
Preface	ix
Part I Introduction
1 The decline and renewal of democratic governance: a theoretical framework	3
Part II Political change in Britain: the development of a strategy gap
2 The mass party system and state strategic capacity in Britain	41
3 Neo-liberalism and the decline of state strategic capacity	70
4 Why the gap in strategic capacity poses a systemic challenge	100
Part III Political change in Australia: the development of a representation gap
5 Everyman is king: representation and strategic capacity in Australia’s mass party period	127
6 Pluralised society, individualised politics: the gap between citizens and the formal political system	154
7 Why a representation gap poses a systemic challenge (and the populist alternative)	183

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-02568-4 - Democratic Decline and Democratic Renewal: Political Change in Britain,
Australia and New Zealand
Ian Marsh and Raymond Miller
Table of Contents
More information

vi	Contents
	Part IV Political change in New Zealand: voting reform, multi-party politics and minority government
8	Identities and capabilities in the mass party era in New Zealand	213
9	Neo-liberalism, social change and democracy	238
10	Is electoral reform sufficient?	261
	Part V Democratic renewal
11	Reconnecting citizens to the political system	289
12	The prospect for democratic renewal	318
	Bibliography	349
	Index	376

Tables

8.1	Estimated aggregate party membership, 1938–2002	page 228
10.1	Type of government and status of parties under MMP	266