

Table of Contents

Introduction – Between Revolution and Reaction	1
Focus 1 Research Question 1 Main Hypothesis and Approach 2 Sources
7 Organisation, Argument and Contribution 7 Literature Review 11
Theories of Modernity and Young Hegelian Thought 16 Conclusion 21
Chapter 1 – Their Experience of the Political Context	23
A map of Intellectual Interaction and its breakdown 23 Interaction 24
David Friedrich Strauss and the division of the Hegelian Group 26 Bauer's defection to the Young Hegelians 28 Friedrich Wilhelm IV 30 Broken Dreams 30 The French-German Alliance 32 Economic Difficulties 32
The Premarch – A Period of Crisis 34 Backwards but with the Best Philosophy 35 Starvation and Economic Crisis in the 1840s 36 Educational System 37 The Experience of the Reform Period 38 The End of the Reform Period 40 Exodus from the University System 43 Conclusion 47
Chapter 2 – Their Experience of the Intellectual Context	49
Hegel as an Atheist 49 France and the Destruction of Religion 50 Anthropological dismantling of Pantheism: Feuerbach 53 The Christian underpinning of the State 55 Against Contemplation 57 Problems in society as philosophical problems 61 What did Hegel really say? 62 The Problem with the Conservative Monarchy 65 Hegel's Philosophy of Right and the Problems of the 1840s 66 Constitutional Monarchy 68 Young Hegelian Philosophy as the realisation of the French Revolution 68 Problems with the French Revolution 70 The Emergence of the Masses 72 The Masses and German Enlightenment 74 The Romantic Underpinning of German Law 76 The Experience of Poverty and the Philosophy of Right 76 Conclusion 81
Chapter 3 – Religion and the Realisation of Philosophy	83
The Realisation of Philosophy 83 Rejecting the Content of Religion 84
Preserving the form of Religion 86 Rejection of the Form of Religion 89
Marx and religion 98 The Jewish Question and the Realisation of Philosophy 100 Marx on the Jewish Question 105 Marx After the Jewish Question 107 Conclusion 114
Chapter 4 – The Future Organisation of Society	117
Debating the role of the Masses 117 Bauer's Political Outlook 117 The Philosopher as the mover 119 Radicalism 120 The Masses and Communism 121 Marx Defends the Proletariat 124 Hess's Criticism of Bauer 127 Radicalism 131 Ruge's Criticism of Communism 132 Ruge's Political Philosophy 133 Public Opinion and the School – The Organs of the New

Religion 136 Bauer and the Cowards of the Opposition 138 Communist Criticism of the State 139 Marx and Hess in Conflict over the Role of the Proletariat 141 The Conflict Commences 141 Communism and Democracy 142 Democracy and the Communist Manifesto 144 Conclusion 146
Chapter 5 – Theories of History before 1848	149
Bruno Bauer's Theory of History 149 Radical Rupture with the Existing 154 Marx's Theory of History 155 The meaning of Verkehr 158 Hess's Concept of Verkehr 161 Verkehrsform 165 History as defined by Form of Property or 'Verkehrsform' 166 Explaining the mistakes made by their contemporaries 167 Implications for Marxist Theory 169 Conclusion 173
Chapter 6 – Enthusiasm and Disillusionment	175
The Revolution of 1848 175 The Events 176 The Frankfurt Experiment 177 The Events in Berlin 178 The National Question 178 Political Associations during the Revolution 180 The Workers' Movement 181 The Era of Reaction 182 Theory and Reality 183 Initial Enthusiasm 184 Disillusionment 189 Bauer's disillusionment 193 Hess's Disillusionment 1852 195 Marx's Disillusionment with the revolution 196 In Search of New Answers – Reading after 1848 198 Conclusion 205
Chapter 7 – New Theoretical Outlooks	209
The Invention of the Superstructure 209 How does this interpretation of the 'Überbau' square with other interpretations? 212 Marx: Society as commodity Relations 215 Scientific basis for Crisis: The Tendency of the Profit rate to Fall 216 Einheit over Freiheit – Arnold Ruge's Answer 218 The Negation of Western Philosophy – Bauer's Answer 221 Rejection of Hegelianism and the Parliamentary Tradition 222 Russia as the Negation of Western Philosophy 224 Bauer: a ghostwriter for the conservatives? 225 Wavering on Russia 1854-1855 228 Bauer Denounces the Philosophy of History 230 Hess's idea of a 'Gleichgewicht' in society 231 Hess's Cyclical Theory of History 234 Hess as a Reformist and Against Revolution 236 Conclusion 237
General Conclusion	241
Findings in relation to the Research Question 241 Contributions to the Understanding of the Young Hegelians 249
Bibliography	253
Secondary Sources 253 Primary Sources 260	