

Contents

Introduction

Questions for Mansholt's biographer	13
---	----

CHAPTER 1

Leaving the polder	25
“You could hear the mud flats and smell them”	25
Big fat farmers	27
Grandpa Derk's clan	32
Bert, Wabien and Socialism	37
Traumatic experience	45
“Show you've got character, right from the start”	51
But the cello comes first!	55
The Depression almost ruined Sicco's dreams	58

CHAPTER 2

Pasir Nangka	67
Fifty letters from the Dutch East Indies, 1934-5	67
The daily work on the plantation	69
Panther hunting	72
The natives	75
Everyone is a bit of a Fascist here in the Dutch East Indies	79
“I'm coming back home”	82
Colonial idiocy	86

CHAPTER 3

Pioneering in the Wieringermeer	91
Back in the polder	91
Fletum	95
Matters of general, social concern	99
The Socialist movement	101
Farming policy guidelines	107
Complete socialization of the land	112
The driving force behind the family	115

CHAPTER 4
War	123
Brownshirts and swastikas	123
The SDAP goes underground	126
Food supplies	133
Famine winter	140
Resistance fighter in gumboots	144
The disaster of 17 April 1945	157
CHAPTER 5
Minister of Food Distribution	169
“Someone has to do it”	169
Food distribution	174
The key question	181
Agriculture took a second place till 1948	185
International cooperation: from FAO to Marshall Plan	189
The waning of the spirit of the Resistance	192
Collective government	200
Exit Van Dam	203
From farmer’s wife to minister’s wife	207
CHAPTER 6
Colonial war in Indonesia	209
Black page	209
Behind Schermerhorn	212
“Endless waffling”	218
“Police action” seems inevitable	221
Mansholt backs declaration of war after all	225
Fatal misunderstanding?	231
CHAPTER 7
Agriculture and politics 1948-1958	237
From ploughing grant to cattle cake position	237
Market and pricing policy with a touch of farmer’s common sense	239
New look: “freedom of development for farming is essential”	244
The farmers’ own minister	251
The ministry of Agriculture finds a place on the map	259
Fighting for agriculture in the cabinet	265
Minister for the Partij van de Arbeid	268
Next Prime Minister after Drees?	275
Mansholt’s political testament as minister of Agriculture	282

CHAPTER 8
A farmer sees the world	287
Personal stamp	287
“We should have that in Holland”	293
Minister of Overseas Development avant la lettre	298
Letters from India and Pakistan	304
Tired of Holland	311
CHAPTER 9
A plan for Europe	315
The task	315
First the cheese, and then Europe	318
The Green Pool (1952-1953): a plot that failed	323
L'échec Européen	329
The Mansholt factor in the integration process	335
The relaunch: Messina, Hertoginnedal, Rome	339
The EEC: a rather small protectionist alliance?	344
A farmer and a Socialist – that’s too much of a good thing	347
Stresa, 3-12 July 1958	350
CHAPTER 10
Pioneer years in Brussels	355
A table and a few chairs	355
Chairman Hallstein	357
The organization	361
Alfred Mozer	366
Complete independence	373
Package deals and marathons	381
You need to do something completely different from time to time.....	385
CHAPTER 11
The first European minister of Agriculture	397
Herculean dimensions	397
Opponents: Van der Beugel, Rehwinkel, de Gaulle	400
Blueprint, main lines and details	407
The first stage, 1958-1962	410
Plotting with Pisani	416
First marathon	418
De Gaulle’s veto	423
Third way or Atlantic partnership?	428
Kennedy	432

Mozer gave Kennedy a few tips	441
CHAPTER 12
The grain is harvested, but the battle is lost	445
The price of grain is a pivotal factor.....	445
Into action: the Mansholt plan of 1963.....	448
Clearing the decks, package deal and grain marathon.....	451
The search for a democratic framework	454
Mansholt versus Vice President Humphrey	458
Absurd proposals – says who?.....	460
July '65: de Gaulle boycotts further integration	467
The biggest disaster since Hitler.....	474
De Gaulle wipes the floor with the Commission.....	477
Mansholt loses his temper	481
Luxembourg Compromise: waiting for France to change its mind	484
CHAPTER 13
Frustration, trouble and strife	489
The home front	489
“He has really been very run down”.....	491
Irritation after the second veto.....	496
Turn of the tide?	500
The notorious plan.....	503
On the barricades	511
March 1971: The farmers declare war.....	515
European integration: butter instead of canons	518
CHAPTER 14.
Radical finale	529
A new Marx.....	529
“Sicco, are you becoming a hippy?”.....	534
Back to The Hague?	538
Europe’s Prime Minister.....	545
Unctad III: North or South.....	547
Friction between Brussels and Washington.....	549
Visit from Moscow	553
Nixon: “That jackass in the European Commission”	556
The summit of missed opportunities (Paris 1972).....	559

CHAPTER 15
Dreams	565
To Wapserveen with Henny	565
Petra Kelly	567
“We don’t have much time to lose!”	575
Boyhood dream	580
Care and commitment.....	583
“Sometimes I have to remind him of the essentials”	588
Epilogue	593
The lark and the First World War.....	593
Pioneer mentality and civil courage	594
Legacy	599
The charisma of Europe.....	604
On politics, politicians and statesmen	605
Explanatory list of abbreviations	609
References	613