

Polish Ideas in Motion. Past to Present.

Edited by Tomasz Zyro

Volume 1

Jan Baszkiewicz

New Man, New Nation, New World

The French Revolution in Myth and Reality

Edited by Janusz Adamowski

PETER LANG

Internationaler Verlag der Wissenschaften

Contents

Regeneration	7
Enlightenment philosophers on revolutionary regeneration	7
The “disappearance” of the ancien régime	12
The Revolution as Final Judgment	16
The Revolution as a process	22
Two images of regeneration	28
The Individual	29
The moral existence of the individual	29
The new man and the Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen	34
Immediate and spontaneous regeneration	39
Regeneration directed and long-term	47
Universal Schooling	53
Problems with compulsory schooling	59
The formation of civic attitudes	63
The goals of the school curriculum	70
Education for adults	75
Education for women	79
The fiasco of educational reform	82
Shedding old skin	87
The liberation of spaces and the toponymic revolution	91
The spatial revolution	96
Revolutionary holidays	102
The republican calendar	111
Regeneration through contact with high culture	118
Popular culture, the problem of vandalism	125
The educational mission of the clubs	131
Education in the armed forces	136
Political participation as a school for “citizenship”	141
Education through work	146
Intentions and results	152
The new man: Was it just utopian?	161
We: The Nation	167
National unity on the ruins of regional differences	167
The problem of linguistic unity	174
Efforts to create a new language	179
Socio-political guarantees of national unity	187
Religion as an instrument of integration	200

Regeneration and integration through law	216
The family, the model for the social community	223
The problem of those excluded from the political community	229
The conflict over political rights for women	233
The vision of a harmonious society	241
They	249
The French Revolution as a universal model	249
Disputes over war	257
Xenophobia's development and its limits	262
The legal and practical situation of foreigners	271
New hope for a world revolution	275
The world in revolutionary futurology	283
Epilogue: The Persistence Of Myths	291