

Childness and the Writing of the German Past

Tropes of Childhood in Contemporary German Literature

Nora Maguire

Peter Lang

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
List of Abbreviations	ix
Introduction: Childness and the Discursive Landscapes of the 'New' Federal Republic	I
PART I Progress and Exculpation	19
CHAPTER 1
The Tabula Rasa and the Innocent Eye in Dieter Forte's Der Junge mit den blutigen Schuhen	21
CHAPTER 2
Childness and the 'New Right': Martin Walser's Ein springender Brunnen	39
PART II The Fascination of Innocence: Desire, Death and the Adult Gaze	63
CHAPTER 3
The Violence of Innocence in Marcel Beyer's Flughunde	67

CHAPTER 4
‘Enchanted Hunters’: Paedophilic Motifs in the Work of W.G. Sebald	85
CHAPTER 5
Innocence, Death and Sebald’s Structures of Mourning	109
PART III	Childness and the Literary Construction of Memory 119
CHAPTER 6
Intimations of Mortality: Childhood Memory and the Child’s Perspective in Sebald’s ‘Il ritorno in patria,’ ‘Max Aurach’ and Austerlitz	121
CHAPTER 7
The Dream of Wholeness: Childness, Memory and Subjectivity in Austerlitz	137
Conclusion: Childness and the Poetics of Persuasion	159
Bibliography	169
Index	185