Of what is past, or passing, or to come

Travelling in Time and Space in Literature in English

Studies in Literature in English
Edited by Liliana Sikorska
Volume 5
Content

Editorial.................................................................................................................................................9

1. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań / University of Social Sciences, Warsaw)
   The heirlooms and burdens of Marina Warner ..................................................................................11

2. Marina Warner (University of Essex)
   They make a desert (and call it peace) ............................................................................................ 23

3. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań / University of Social Sciences, Warsaw)
   The voyage inside oneself: Cathy Caruth’s investigation of trauma ..............................................31

4. Cathy Caruth (Cornell University, Ithaca)
   Disappearing history: Scenes of trauma in the theater of human rights ...... 35

5. Simon Bacon (Independent Researcher, Poznań)
   “Enter freely and of your own will”: Invitations, travel and trauma in Bram Stoker’s Dracula .................................................................65

6. Katarzyna Burzyńska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań)
   Self-fashioning as an identity-shaping process in Marina Warner’s Indigo and William Shakespeare’s The tempest ........................................................................77

7. Daragh Downes (Trinity College, Dublin)
   “I’ll drown my book”: Travels between the lines of Shakespeare’s The tempest and Dickens’s A Christmas carol .................................................................................93

8. Sabina Fazli (The University of Göttingen)
   “The token of some great grief, which had been conquered, but not banished”: Trauma, things, and domestic interiors in Collins, Dickens, and Raabe .................................................................................................................107
9. Katarzyna Kuczma (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań)
   The narrative of loss in Joan Didion’s Blue nights ........................................ 121

10. Jessica Quick (Saint Louis University, Madrid)
    Writing the nation: Discourses of power in Richard Hakluyt’s Principal navigations ......................................................................................................................... 135

11. Tony Seaton (MacAnally Professor of Travel History and Behaviour, Centre for Tourism Policy Studies, University of Limerick, Ireland)
    The Unknown Mother: Thanatourism and metempsychotic remembrance after World War I ........................................................................................................ 143

12. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań / University of Social Sciences, Warsaw)
    Untold stories: Reclaiming the past through (auto-biographical) narratives ......................................................................................................................... 171

13. Marta Wiszniowska-Majchrzyk (Kardynał Stefan Wyszyński University, Warsaw)
    Memory and forgetfulness in the recent Booker novels .......................... 197

14. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań / University of Social Sciences, Warsaw)
    Actors in The water theatre: In interview with Lindsay Clarke ............... 213