

Sven Scheibmayr

Graphical User Interface Prototyping for Distributed Requirements Engineering

ANWENDUNGEN
PROBLEME
WISSEN

Contents

|                                                                                        |             |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Acknowledgments                                                                 | v    |
| List of Figures                                                                 | xi   |
| List of Tables                                                                  | xiii |
| List of Abbreviations                                                           | xv   |
| 1. Introduction                                                                 | 1    |
| 1.1. Problem Outline . . . . .                                                         | 1           |
| 1.2. Research Focus and Objective . . . . .                                            | 3           |
| 1.3. Research Method . . . . .                                                         | 6           |
| 1.4. Organization of this Thesis . . . . .                                             | 7           |
| 2. Foundations                                                                  | 9    |
| 2.1. Requirements Engineering . . . . .                                                | 9           |
| 2.1.1. Requirements Engineering as a Discipline in Software De-velopment . . . . . | 9           |
| 2.1.2. Requirements Engineering Process . . . . .                                      | 16          |
| 2.2. Distributed and Collaborative Software Engineering . . . . .                      | 22          |
| 2.3. Graphical User Interface Prototypes . . . . .                                     | 26          |
| 2.4. Design Science Research . . . . .                                                 | 31          |
| 2.5. Related Research . . . . .                                                        | 35          |
| 3. Theory-informed Design                                                       | 39   |
| 3.1. Theoretical Concepts . . . . .                                                    | 39          |

|                                                                                                  |            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 3.1.1. Boundary Objects . . . . .                                                                | 39         |
| 3.1.2. Cognitive-Affective Model of Organizational Communi-cation for Designing IT . . . . . | 44         |
| 3.1.3. Media Synchronicity Theory . . . . .                                                      | 47         |
| 3.2. Design Implications . . . . .                                                               | 50         |
| 3.3. Preliminary Evaluation . . . . .                                                            | 51         |
| 3.4. Existing Tools . . . . .                                                                    | 54         |
| 4. Designed Artifacts                                                                     | 59  |
| 4.1. A Method for Distributed GUI Prototyping . . . . .                                          | 59         |
| 4.1.1. Conceptual Overview of the Method . . . . .                                               | 59         |
| 4.1.2. Steps of the Method . . . . .                                                             | 63         |
| 4.1.3. Example Scenarios . . . . .                                                               | 65         |
| 4.2. A Tool for Distributed GUI Prototyping . . . . .                                            | 69         |
| 4.2.1. Description of Use . . . . .                                                              | 70         |
| 4.2.2. Technologies . . . . .                                                                    | 88         |
| 4.2.3. Architecture . . . . .                                                                    | 100        |
| 5. Evaluation                                                                             | 115 |
| 5.1. Evaluation Context . . . . .                                                                | 115        |
| 5.2. Evaluation Design . . . . .                                                                 | 121        |
| 5.3. Evaluation Results . . . . .                                                                | 122        |
| 5.3.1. Proposition P1 – Shared Understanding . . . . .                                           | 122        |
| 5.3.2. Proposition P2 – Collaboration Efficiency . . . . .                                       | 126        |
| 5.3.3. Suggestions for Improvements . . . . .                                                    | 128        |
| 6. Discussion                                                                             | 131 |
| 6.1. Contributions . . . . .                                                                     | 131        |
| 6.2. Implications . . . . .                                                                      | 133        |
| 6.3. Limitations . . . . .                                                                       | 134        |

|                                                              |            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 7. Summary and Outlook                                | 135 |
| 7.1. Summary . . . . .                                       | 135        |
| 7.2. Outlook . . . . .                                       | 138        |
| A. Interview Guideline for the Preliminary Evaluation | 141 |
| B. Interview Guideline for the Evaluation             | 143 |
| Bibliography                                          | 145 |