Travelling Texts: J.M. Coetzee and Other Writers
Contents

Bożena Kucała and Robert Kusek
J.M. Coetzee and Other Writers ..................................................................................13

Chapter One: “From a Far Country”

Johan Geertsema
Hidden Literality: Coetzee, Beckett, Herbert, and the Attempt to “Touch Reality” ..........................................................................................21

Bożena Kucała
On Lost Causes: Zbigniew Herbert and J.M. Coetzee ...........................................35

Wojciech Drąg
Putting It Bluntly: Elizabeth Costello in Krzysztof Warlikowski’s (A)pollonia ..... 49

Robert Kusek
Travelling Texts, Travelling Ideas. Janina Duszejko Meets
Elizabeth Costello, or on Reading J.M. Coetzee in 21st Century Poland ............63

Zofia Ziemann
The Inner and Outer Workings of Translation Reception:
Coetzee on (Wieniewska’s) Schulz .................................................................79

Chapter Two: “Notes from the East”

Pojanut Suthipinittharm
Finding Authenticity in an Inauthentic Novel: J.M. Coetzee’s
The Master of Peters burg as Personal Confession .............................................95

Hania A.M. Nashef
Let the Demon in: Death and Guilt in The Master of Petersburg ......................107
Angelika Reichmann
“The Only Truth Is Silence”: Stavrogin’s Confession Revisited in J.M. Coetzee’s The Master of Petersburg ................................................................. 121

Chapter Three: “In the European Core”

Joanna Jeziorska-Haładyj
Matters of Rhythm, Masters of Form............................................................... 137

Duncan McColl Chesney
Serious Fiction: Coetzee and Kertész Under the Sign of K.......................... 147

Kamil Michta
Shame and Morality: John Maxwell Coetzee’s Disgrace in the Context of Walter Benjamin’s Reading of Franz Kafka’s The Trial ...................... 163

Olga Glebova
The Art of J.M. Coetzee and the Legacy of European Modernism: The Kafka Intertext in Elizabeth Costello................................................................. 175

Ottilia Veres
Remembering Beckett: J.M. Coetzee’s Life and Times of Michael K........... 187

Krystyna Stamirowska
Other Selves and the Human World in J.M. Coetzee’s Life and Times of Michael K (1983) and Franz Kafka’s The Metamorphosis (1915)....... 199

Marek Pawlicki
Reflections on Ethics and Creativity: A Discussion of Literary Works by J.M. Coetzee, Robert Musil and Czesław Miłosz................................................. 213

Jan Tlustý
On Unreliability of Memories: J.M. Coetzee’s Autofictional Trilogy.............. 225

Eglė Keturakienė and Gabija Bankauskaitė-Sereikienė
Henrikas Radauskas and Rainer Maria Rilke: Parallels in Their Poetry......... 239
Chapter Four: “The Middle World”

J U Jacobs
Writing from a Middle World: Perspectives on, and from, South Africa ....... 251

Kai Wiegandt
Icarus and Albatross: Rising above Nationality in J.M. Coetzee’s Autrebiographies and Damon Galgut’s In a Strange Room .................................................. 271

Ryszard Bartnik
Frozen Thoughts on (Post-)Apartheid Transgressions as Conducive to Producing New “Unsolicited” Sprouts of Contriteness. Tony Eprile in Line with John Maxwell Coetzee on the Importance of Memory in Democratic South Africa ........................................... 283

Krzysztof Kowalczyk-Twarowski
The Middle Voice: Positionality and Agency in J.M. Coetzee’s Work ........... 295

Lilia Miroshnychenko
“We’ll Land Together on That Shore”: Sceptical Mind in Doris Lessing’s The Cleft ............................................................................................................ 305

Notes on Contributors ........................................................................................... 319