

Marek Dobrzeniecki

The Conflicts of Modernity in
Ludwig Wittgenstein's
Tractatus
Logico-Philosophicus

European Studies in Theology,
Philosophy and History of Religions

Edited by Bartosz Adamczewski

PETER LANG
EDITION

Table of Contents

Introduction.....	9
Chapter 1. The Problem of Ontology in the Tractatus	21
1.1 Anti-metaphysical interpretation of the Tractatus	22
1.1.1 Anti-metaphysical interpretation and the tasks of philosophy	22
1.1.2 The context principle in the Tractatus	26
1.1.3 In defence of semantic atomism	31
1.2 The Argument for Substance.....	49
1.2.1 The argument from the false judgement or thinking what is not	52
1.2.2 The argument from the determinateness of sense	54
1.2.3 Zalabardo's objections.....	58
Summary	67
Chapter 2. The Simple Objects of the Tractatus	71
2.1 Phenomenalistic interpretation of the simples	73
2.1.1 The question of Russell's influence on the Tractatus	74
2.1.2 Arguments in favour of the phenomenalistic interpretation	77
2.1.3 Counterarguments	82
2.2 Materialistic interpretation of the simples.....	88
2.2.1 Simple objects as material points, point-masses or physical atoms.....	90
2.2.2 Arguments in favour of the materialistic interpretation	95
2.2.3 Advantages of the materialistic interpretation.....	107
2.2.4 Counterarguments.....	110
2.3 Resolute interpretation of the Tractatus	113
2.3.1 The principles of the resolute interpretation.....	114

2.3.2 The notion of philosophy in the Tractatus	118
Summary	125
 Chapter 3. Wittgenstein's Theory of Judgement.....	129
3.1 The context of Wittgenstein's theory	133
3.1.1 Russell's theory of judgement.....	134
3.1.2 The notion of the empirical self.....	139
3.2 Wittgenstein's criticism of Russell's views on judgement.....	143
3.3 The Tractatus 5.54-5.5422	149
3.3.1 Conceptual clarifications	149
3.3.2 The form of "A believes that p" according to Wittgenstein	151
3.3.3 Consequences of Wittgenstein's theory of judgement	154
3.3.4 The repudiation of the existence of the complex soul (TLP 5.5421).....	156
3.4 Other interpretations of TLP 5.54-5.5422	159
3.4.1 Anscombe: TLP 5.54-5.5422 and the extensionality principle....	160
3.4.2 Hacker: Hume's influence on Wittgenstein's theory	162
3.4.3 Jacquette: the distinguishability problem	165
Summary	167
 Chapter 4. The Transcendental Self	171
4.1 The transcendental philosophy of Schopenhauer.....	172
4.1.1 Schopenhauer and the notion of the transcendental self.....	172
4.1.2 Schopenhauer and the safeguarding of values.....	178
4.2 The willing subject	181
4.2.1 Examples of transcendental interpretations referring to Wittgenstein's ethics	182
4.2.2 Counterarguments	184
4.3 Solipsistic theses of the Tractatus	192
4.3.1 The transcendental self as the owner of the phenomenal world.....	193
4.3.2 The transcendental self as the linguistic soul.....	196

4.3.3 Arguments in favour of Tractarian transcendental solipsism	200
4.4 Tractarian understanding of death	210
4.5 General remarks about the transcendental interpretation	212
4.5.1 Is the nonsense of solipsism illuminating?.....	213
4.5.2 Transcendental reasoning.....	217
Summary	219
 Chapter 5. Ethics in Wittgenstein's Early Writings	 221
5.1 The nonsense of ethics in the eyes of early Wittgenstein.....	224
5.1.1 The absoluteness of moral values	225
5.1.2 The sense of proposition and the idea of objectivity.....	229
5.2 Early Wittgenstein's subjectivism.....	233
5.2.1 Ethical sentences as expressions of attitudes.....	233
5.2.2 Ethical subjectivism and Tractarian silence.....	239
5.2.3 Wittgenstein's subjectivism and early Russell's emotivism.....	241
5.3 Solipsistic theses of the Tractatus under a subjectivist reading	246
Summary	251
 Final Thoughts. The Defence of Human Values by early Wittgenstein.....	 253
 Bibliography.....	 263