

CONTENTS.

LETTER I.

GENERAL preliminary reflections on the Peace.—Subjects of enquiry proposed.—Former slavery of the negroes in the French Colonies defined and described.—Nature of the recent changes in their condition stated and proved.—Reasons assigned for believing that a restitution of the old slavery is the true object which the West India expedition is designed to accomplish.

LETTER II.

The probable issue of the expedition as far as relates to the French Colonies enquired into.—Motives that will induce the negroes to resist.—Their means of resistance.—General difficulties of West India war.—Their nature and causes explained.—Comparative advantages possessed by negro troops.—Means of repelling invasion arising from the face of the country

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-02047-3 - The Crisis of the Sugar Colonies

James Stephen

Table of Contents

More information

[vi]

country and the climate.—Difficulties of keeping the negroes in subjection if conquered, and of restoring permanently the former system of bondage.

LETTER III.

The probable consequences of the expedition more immediately affecting the interest of Great Britain in the West Indies considered.—1st, Consequences of the total failure of the enterprise.—2d, Those of a middle event or compromise; or of an immediate agreement on the basis of the liberty of the negroes.—3d, Probable effects of the entire success of the supposed enterprise of the Republic.—Dangers to which the British Islands will in either of these cases be exposed.

LETTER IV.

Measures that the prospects opened in the former letters should suggest.—A strict neutrality between France and her Colonies recommended.—Means of defence that ought to be prepared in our West India Islands.—Right of Parliament to make laws for the government of the Colonies considered.—THOUGHTS ON THE MEANS OF SETTLING TRINIDAD.—The vacant lands ought not to be settled by means of slavery and the Slave Trade.—The sale

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-02047-3 - The Crisis of the Sugar Colonies

James Stephen

Table of Contents

More information

[vii]

sale of the Crown lands ought at least to be deferred.—Moral view of the question of opening a new slave Colony after the resolutions of the House of Commons in 1792.—Innocent uses that may be made of this Island.—Its commercial advantages.—The practicability of cultivating the uncleared lands by the labour of free negroes.—General suggestions on that head.—Conclusion.